

Nina Wouk

Anti-coagulant rodenticides always kill animals other than their intended targets and should never be used, not by households, not by businesses, not by government agencies, not by anybody. There are less gruesome and more selective ways to kill mice and rats. Cats are my favorite (though they also eat birds). Traps that electrocute only the animals that enter are very selective. Stick to things that don't kill innocent bystander pets and wildlife.