

Karen Jacques

Anti coagulants are indiscriminate in the harm that they cause. They cause immense suffering which makes them ethically unacceptable no matter what species consumes them and suffers and dies from them. They are described as rodenticides but they kill multiple species, including endangered species. I have long believed and I continue to believe that the only humane response to them is to ban them and to do so as fast as possible.