

Kelly Vickers

As a long term California resident who owns her business and makes what most would consider a decent wage, I am struggling to make ends meet. California wages are not keeping up with the cost of living in this state. Any additional regulations that would increase prices (gas tax increases cost of transportation which trickles down to the cost of items) would only make this worse. We need to put a stop to this ending gouging of California residents. We are at our breaking point.