

KONSTANTINOS ARVANITAKIS

Carb may have made sense when it was first created, but it's time to rethink the entire approach. People are already struggling with the cost of living, and they're not going to quietly accept policies that push it even higher. California needs solutions that reduce burdens, not more regulations that make life more expensive. If the goal is to maintain public support and avoid a political backlash, the current path needs to change. Enough is enough.