

Ramchandra Reddy

I am very concerned about this state allowing unelected members of CARB to unilaterally take steps that would increase gas prices and make the cost of living even worse. This will negatively impact people of color and those in low income communities. It will also drive away good and union paying jobs from refineries and pipelines and negatively impact working class families in Southern California. There are other ways to effect climate change without bankrupting the average Californian who drives a gas powered car and pays the highest prices in the nation to fill up already
