

Brian Rohmer

I have been following this issue for some time. California has a reputation for excessive regulations that make life expensive for all citizens, especially the poor. These regulations on refineries and other businesses are killing our state. The president of Chevron just sent a warning that these proposed updates will strangle the last remaining refineries in this state. I cannot afford an electric vehicle and the infrastructure does not exist to support it. Please stop killing California with excessive regulation. We are hurting out here.