I run a small household budget and have noticed that water quality problems in the south side are costing us real money.

The smell of chlorine is strongest on some days but not others, and it lingers on my hands after washing dishes.

There is a thin yellow tint in the bathtub water that I first noticed about three years ago.

I once filled a clear glass and found tiny particles floating in it, which really worried me.

Dishes come out of the dishwasher with a film on them no matter which detergent we use.

I am concerned about lead from old service lines, because many homes in the downtown district were built decades ago.

Pregnant women and infants are the most vulnerable, so safety margins should be strict and well communicated.

Independent third-party testing, at least once a year, would build much more trust in the numbers.

I installed a reverse osmosis system under the sink, but I resent paying for a fix that the utility should have handled.

Fishing and recreation on the nearby river depend on healthy source water, so protecting the watershed benefits everyone.
