I am concerned about maintaining good water quality in Lake Vancouver. Our granddaughter was involved with the Vancouver Lake rowing club for several years. It was a great experience for her. Because of that opportunity she has been able to attend college on a scholarship. Vancouver Lake is the only place in our immediate area where kids can start rowing at a young age. Schools in our area do not offer rowing among the sports they have available so it is only through private clubs that kids can be involved in crew. There were many days during this last summer when they could not be on the lake because of the quality of the water. The lake is also used for competition purposes for much of the west coast. It is a favorite location by many clubs for these events and would be hard to replace.
