

Thomas Nieland

So-called 'inert' ingredients must be thoroughly vetted before being included in products used in organic food production! These inert ingredients may not actually be chemically inactive when ingested or after applying to food crops in the fields.