

Sandra Woodall

In pharmaceuticals 'inert' ingredients can cause reactions in patients. I assume the same is true in food. Just because something is considered 'inert' doesn't mean it will be so for every consumer.