

Mary Smith

Preemption of local authority to restrict pesticide use is a key issue of the 118th Congress—undercutting the local democratic process to protect public health and undermining nearly 200 U.S. communities that have passed more restrictive policies. The National Organic Program must evaluate “inert” ingredients used in organic production.